i couldn't find where to send a feedback so i'm sending from here. I think it would be a great idea to have a voting section on the website and app and people could vote on what they would purchase. this way you guys will produce products your audience likes. I heard that some F21 stores were closing down and as a teen i know what my peers think about your store. some products on your website are not stuff young people would wear (teenagers) so this way you won't sell things people don't like and you would make more money. Also personal tests can personalize your app to have things you like. Such as, asking their clothing style (edgy, casual, basic, etc) and this way the app/website will show more of their style on their main page. Points could also be used in the app/website. many online shops do these (romwe, shein) and by sharing about the deals or completing surveys the customers could earn points. every 100 points could deduct 1 dollar off their purchase. Another way to earn points could be by reviewing products (10 points for a review or 20 point for a review with photos) There could be giveaways where you guys could send products (30,50,100 dollars worth) to participants. Many people would join And they should have an account in order to participate. this will increase customers and cause people to look through the website more often. But after this holiday season, more of its stores will go dark.The fast-fashion retailer's rapid expansion internationally took a toll on the company and contributed to Forever 21's decision to file for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection in September. At the time, it had more than 800 stores worldwide.Its focus on expansion made it unable to invest in its supply chain, and so Forever 21 took more time to get fresh styles of clothes to market at a time when fast fashion was really picking up and shoppers were hungry for newness. Its sales tumbled as Forever 21 was pitted against heightened competition from rivals such as H&M and Zara.Forever 21 also was burdened by its massive stores that can be as large as a department store, or more than 100,000 square feet. The company's founders, the Changs, wanted to open more locations quickly, and so they ended up buying bigger shops from now-bankrupt retailers such as Sears, Morvyn's and Borders.Analysts also say Forever 21 failed to understand some of the markets outside of America as it opened more shops in places such as China and London.During its bankruptcy proceedings, Forever 21 said it plans to exit most of its businesses overseas, in Asia and Europe. It plans to continue operating in its stronger regions of Mexico and Latin America. And it doesn't plan to exit any major markets in the U.S., though it will shut dozens of stores there.The total number of stores that will be shuttered, however, remains unknown, as the company continues to negotiate with landlords.At its peak, Forever 21 was bringing in more than $4 billion in sales annually.Looking to the future, Forever 21 has said it wants to focus on the U.S. and making sure the quality of its clothes is up to par, which could win back shoppers.The privately held retailer declined to participate in this video. Employees who fill out a Forever 21 job application are signing up to be a part of something bigger than just punching a clock.For 30 years, the fifth largest specialty retailer in the United States has been donating to charities, including the Humane Society of the United States, the American Red Cross, and Susan G. Komen for the Cure.The company follows a strict environmentally friendly policy, and demands fair working conditions for vendor and affiliate employees.If you're looking to land a job with Forever 21, the following Land Your Life-exclusive guide will teach you how to present the best of you to the hiring manager.This family-owned business is planning to open 600 new stores by 2017, for which it will hire thousands of new employees.
